Introducing Heart Mate. The state of the art for a healthy heart. And body.

The Heart Mate aerobic conditioning system. Advance technology and design make it the ultimate form of aerobic exercise.

Aerobic conditioning has always been the best way to strengthen your heart and control weight more easily. And according to many leading cardiologists, it can help reduce stress and make you less susceptible to heart disease.

Unfortunately, most forms of aerobic exercise can either injure you, bore you, or prematurely fatigue you—before you really get into shape. The answer is Heart Mate.

Heart Mate virtually eliminates the risk of injury common to running and most sports. By suspending your body weight, Heart Mate frees your joints and spine from the dangers of continual pounding.

Only Heart Mate has a built-in entertainment center—complete with TV and AM/FM radio to keep you company during long workouts. And Heart Mate's computer provides brief, perfectly-timed intervals of rest that prevent the early muscle fatigue common to most other exercises. It allows you to workout longer and get the benefits of sustained aerobics, plus greater calorie burnup.

Heart Mate also provides you with a constant update on your heart rate and calorie consumption, and, what's even more important, it keeps you motivated by showing you your fitness improvement on a day-to-day basis.

In fact, every last detail of the Heart Mate design—created by a major aerospace company—is perfectly "right" from the anatomically-engineered frame to the electronic signal that reminds you it's time for your daily workout.

Heart Mate is much more than an exercise bike. It's an integrated system that gets you into true aerobic shape—efficiently, scientifically, and safely.

To find out more about the advantages and the value of Heart Mate, write or call us today. You'll discover the State of the Art for a healthy heart and body.

Information about this year's Homecoming festivities, at which the Parrot will make a repeat appearance, is contained in this issue.

From the President

An important goal of the university is to offer students an opportunity to become acquainted with different peoples and cultures and to broaden their views of the world. Let me share with you some of the ways IUP has been striving to "internationalize the university" to accomplish this goal.

At this writing, IUP has a number of national and international exchange linkages, probably more than any other school in the commonwealth. IUP belongs to both the International Student Exchange Program (ISEP) and the National Student Exchange (NSEP)--memberships that put us in touch with over a hundred other colleges throughout the nation and the world. Full-time students at IUP can apply for one-year exchange placements in Africa, Asia, Australia, the British Isles, Canada, Europe, or Latin America through ISEP or choose to study at sixty other participating colleges or universities in the United States through NSEP. In addition, IUP has formal exchange agreements with universities in Valladolid, Spain; Duisburg, Germany; Nancy, France; Jallapa, Mexico; Pune, India; Salzburg, Austria; Lucca, Italy; London, England; Cairo, Egypt; and Shanghai, China. And the university is currently negotiating additional exchange agreements with universities in Chile, in England, and in Italy.

IUP students accepted for one of these programs spend the semester or year at the exchange institution at a tuition cost similar to what they would pay to study on campus. Exchange students pay their individual room, board, and transportation fees as well.

These programs offer tremendous academic advantages to our students. Those who study abroad may be in a "total immersion" program where, enrolled as regular students, they experience the culture and speak the language of their host country. Or they may be in a study-abroad program where instruction is available in English even though the country is non-English speaking. Students taking advantage of National Exchange Program opportunities can study courses which will apply toward their major while experiencing a different educational setting and developing an increased awareness of the cultural and geographical diversity within the United States. This semester, eighty-two IUP students are studying at other institutions through an exchange program, and 208 foreign students from fifty-five countries are enrolled at IUP--a record number for the university.

The variety and flexibility inherent in these programs is illustrated by the following examples: a student from Alaska, who is enrolled at the University of Hawaii and who spent the fall semester at the University of Montana, is studying at IUP this spring; an Oregon student spent last semester at IUP, her mother's alma mater; an IUP student interested in studying Chinese is taking additional courses at the University of Hawaii; an IUP geology major is spending a year pursuing his major field of study in Australia; and six IUP students are currently student teaching in England.

Through the Faculty Exchange Program, students who remain on campus also have an opportunity to expand their knowledge of another culture. This spring there are four foreign exchange professors teaching at IUP: Dr. Harold Lutchman from the University of Guyana; Dr. Mary Masoud from Ain Shams University, Cairo, Egypt; Professor Zhang Wei Lang from the Shanghai Foreign Language Institute, China; and Dr. Prabhakar R. Karmarkar from the University of Poona, Pune, India.

IUP has had a Center for Faculty Exchange since 1978 and serves as the clearinghouse for faculty exchanges within the State System of Higher Education. Currently, four IUP professors are studying or teaching abroad: Dr. Harry Craig is at Ain Shams University, Dr. Gopal Kulkarni and Curtis Paddock are at the University of Poona, and Dr. Tom Goodrich is a Fulbright scholar for the year in Istanbul, Turkey. IUP also serves as the Center for the Association of Overseas Educators, whose members, former Fulbright professors, provide orientation for professors going abroad.

This past January, I spent two weeks in Egypt visiting with officials of several Egyptian universities to explore the possibilities of extending faculty and student exchange programs. Such exchanges would provide special opportunities for our faculty and students to learn more about the Middle East--an area that plays an increasingly important role in world affairs.

The exploration of different cultures, new geographic settings, and diverse academic programs is a significant part of higher education. We believe it's important to encourage IUP students to study foreign languages and to take advantage of programs that can extend their world understanding.

IUP is OSHA's Friend in Pennsylvania

IUP's safety sciences department has been selected as the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) consulting agency for the state of Pennsylvania. In this capacity, the department will provide official advice on health and safety in the workplace to hundreds of the state's employers this year.

The project is funded with a grant of $519,900 in federal OSHA monies matched by $57,700 from the state. It will operate under the terms of an agreement between OSHA and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

According to Robert E. McClay Jr., chairman of IUP's safety sciences department, seven professionals have been hired to serve as full-time occupational safety and health consultants and the department's eight faculty members are working part time on the project. Faculty member Robert Soule has been named project manager.

SSHE Selects IUP Alumnus As First Head

James H. McCormick '59 is to be the first permanent chancellor of Pennsylvania's System of Higher Education (SSHE). Announcing Dr. McCormick's selection in March, SSHE Board of Governors' Chairman F. Eugene Dixon, Jr., said, "... after a nationwide search, we have found a 'diamond' in our own backyard."

The Chancellor Search Committee reviewed sixty-seven applications for the position. There were seven finalists.

Dr. McCormick began serving as interim chancellor on July 1, 1983, the start-up date for the state's new system of higher education. Since that time, he has assumed what he terms an "advocacy role" for the system's fourteen universities and their constituencies.

Dr. McCormick took a leave from the presidency of Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania to fill the interim position. His ten-year tenure there, 1973 to 1983, was highlighted by growth in the student population, the academic programs, and the physical plant. He is also credited with the initiation of successful strategic planning at the university.

According to Dixon, the chancellor has a three-year contract, effective July 1, 1984, to June 30, 1987, at $70,000 per year. He will have the same benefits and entitlements currently held by the system's university presidents.

A Delectable Department Offers More

Three new programs are part of the educational offerings in IUP's food and nutrition department. They include a food and nutrition science major, a food service and lodging management major, and a graduate program in food and nutrition.

According to Ronald E. Simkins '55, department chairperson, the new programs were four years in development. Each fills a gap in the department's curriculum.

Based on an interdisciplinary approach, the food and nutrition science major gives students background in chemistry, physics, and food research. "Food and nutrition science is a popular concept now," Simkins said, "and this allows us to attract students who heretofore may not have considered IUP. It gives us a valuable recruiting tool."

Similarly, the food service and lodging management major fills a demand not currently met by many institutions. "Some community colleges offer associate degrees in lodging or hotel management," he said, "but until now, there were very few places in Pennsylvania for students to get a bachelor's degree."

The master's program, in which about thirty students are already enrolled, is designed for students with bachelor's degrees in food and nutrition or related areas. Before its establishment, graduate students in the food and nutrition area had to enroll in the Graduate School's Professional Growth program.

"In the past, we had graduate courses but no program," Simkins said.

Briefly, . . .

Dr. Chancy R. Rawleigh of IUP's sociology-anthropology department is serving an one-year term as president of the Pennsylvania Sociology Society. The organization has 3,600 members.

After more than twenty-three years at IUP, Dr. Esko E. Newhill retired from the sociology-anthropology department faculty in December. He continues to live in Indiana.

Dr. Mary Renck Jalongo, a faculty member in IUP's elementary education department, was named Pennsylvania's Outstanding Young Woman of 1983.

The most prestigious ROTC honor presented by the Association of the United States Army was given last winter to IUP's Tenth Pennsylvania Company. Designated "most active company," the IUP ROTC group was recognized during the AUSA national convention in Washington. Colonel Willard L. Robinson '70 and more than thirty students and cadets from IUP received briefings during the convention from Army Secretary John O. Marsh.

The American College Personnel Association recently elected Dr. John D. Welty, IUP vice-president for student and university affairs, to the office of treasurer. With more than seven thousand members, the association is the largest national professional organization for student affairs.

Gamma Xi, the IUP chapter of Phi Gamma Nu, the honorary business fraternity, has been recognized for having the highest grade point average in the nation for the fourth time. The chapter, which had a combined grade point average of 3.52 out of a possible 4.0, competed with chapters from more than fifty academic institutions nationwide.

Two presidents: University President John Worthen stands in front of Sutton with Foundation for IUP President Edward Mackey.

Board Plays Big Part at Foundation

For any organization to be successful, it must be manned by a crew able to steer it toward its goals and purposes.

The twenty-four-member Board of Directors of the Foundation for IUP is responsible for the overall operation of the foundation, according to Anthony Lenzi '54, executive director.

A large part of the board's work centers on assisting in fund raising campaigns, Lenzi said. This includes volunteering for and serving as chairpersons for campaigns, working to get others involved in campaigns, and helping to establish target groups and lists of donors.

According to Lenzi, the success of the foundation's activities is, in large part, dependent on the guidance and assistance of the board members.

An 8-member executive committee heads the board, giving approval on policy matters, the operating budget, and committee assignments.

Committee members are board President Edward Mackey, a vice-president with Advest Inc.; Vice-President Robert Duggan, president of the Savings and Trust Company of Pennsylvania; Secretary Joan Waldo '52, an Indiana resident; Treasurer Christopher Knowlton '69(M), executive director of the IUP Student Cooperative Association; Warner Tobin '51, director of the IUP University School; Thelma Goldstroh, an Indiana resident; William Kegel, president of the R and P Coal Company; and Charles Davis '34, a retired faculty member of the IUP music department.

The board consists of six members nominated by the IUP Council of Trustees, six sponsors from the President's Council, six faculty members, and six alumni named upon recommendation of the IUP Alumni Association.

The Council of Trustees representatives are Duggan, Kegel, William Leasure, Ron Ruble, and Joseph Kovalchick, with a sixth to be appointed. President's Council sponsors are Mackey, Waldo, Goldstroh, Paul McGregor '34, and Fred Kunkle, with a sixth position to be filled.

Current alumni representatives are Davis, Lenzi, Tobin, Trevor Hadley '37, Mary Jane Tuttle '47, and Mary Helen Smail '66. The faculty representatives are Dominic Intili, Anita Henry, Dale Landon, Judith Moorhead '74(M), Robert Boldin, and Richard Chamberlin.

In addition, the board also has three nonvoting trustees' liaisons. These liaisons, IUP Council of Trustees members Samuel Jack, John McCue, and Ted Fick '84, keep the trustees updated on the actions of the foundation board.

Retired Faculty Spotlight

by S. Trevor Hadley '37

The Retired Faculty Spotlight for June is on Joy Mahachek.

Dr. Mahachek, "Joy" to everyone who knows her, came to Indiana in 1921 directly from graduation at the University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls. The university was one of the first to offer a special program in the supervision of student teaching.

Joy supervised student teachers at Indiana State Normal School from 1921 to 1923 and then took a leave to complete graduate work at Columbia and at Pittsburgh. When she returned to Indiana in 1927, she began a distinguished career as a professor of mathematics, as chairperson of the mathematics department, and finally as coordinator of secondary education. Her thirty-nine-year career at Indiana was marked by total professionalism, excellent teaching, and a commitment to the improvement of teacher education and of the institution itself.

"We did not feel that we were discriminated against because we were women," Joy said in a recent letter. "Perhaps that was because the mandated salary schedule of Pennsylvania provided equal salary for men and women doing the same work."

Joy worked for six presidents (all of them men) at Indiana, from Dr. Keith to Dr. Pratt. She said she is "proud of the many mathematics students who have become teachers of grade school, high school, and college mathematics or college administrators as deans or presidents."

Joy Mahachek in the late thirties . . .

Joy worked for six presidents (all of them men) at Indiana, from Dr. Keith to Dr. Pratt. She said she is "proud of the many mathematics students who have become teachers of grade school, high school, and college mathematics or college administrators as deans or presidents."

In the fifties, she noted, much of her time was spent "finding good mathematics faculty to expand the department. Many of those teachers are still in the department. I'm glad I lived through the developing years of IUP. I fear that I might find some of its new problems overwhelming."

Joy came to Indiana "when there were only two miles of paved road out of town in each direction."

"Perhaps with this length of service," she said, "I ought to be a hundred years old but not quite. I am physically active. I drive to do shopping and errands and trips to Minneapolis when weather permits. I enjoy making out taxes for the elderly--some less elderly than I am. Here in the apartment complex I help people fill out health insurance forms and balance checkbooks. I sometimes read for people with impaired sight. In any case, I find plenty to do."

Joy lives at 1201 Garfield Avenue, Apt. 128, Albert Lea, Minnesota 56007. She would be pleased to hear from old friends.

A Dozen Winners Receive Recognition

Ten alumni and two seniors were honored during Alumni Weekend on the IUP campus in April. Five alumni were presented with awards, and five others came to campus as alumni ambassadors. The latter were selected by academic areas of the university in a program sponsored by the IUP Alumni Association.

Dr. Margaret A. Smith '71(M)

Dr. Margaret A. Smith '71(M) was chosen to receive the Citation for Achievement, and Robert Reynolds '48 was the recipient of the Citation for Service. Those receiving Outstanding Alumni awards were Annalee Rosenswieg Henderson '57, Dr. Joseph R. Henderson '39, and Mary Kathryn Pound Jenkinson '37.

Alumni ambassadors included Dr. Penny L. Burge '69 (College of Home Economics), Dr. Nancy Zebraskey Nelson '57 (Department of Elementary Education), Thomas J. Senn '74 (Department of Safety Sciences), Paul E. von Geis '77(M) (Department of Criminology), and George S. Walochik '49 (Department of Geography and Regional Planning).

Recipient of the Senior Award for Academic Excellence was Frederick D. Chapman. Second Lt. David S. Shekmer was presented the Senior Award for Service.

Selections of the alumni award winners were made from nominations submitted by alumni and other IUP community members. The 1984 Alumni Awards Committee comprised Richard A. Fiscus '78, Dr. John E. Frank '58, Muriel Smith Hostetler '41, Mary Park Jack '36, Sharon L. Santus '73, and Robert C. Shoemaker '60.

A similar selection process was used for the senior awards, which are sponsored by the Indiana County Chapter of the IUP Alumni Association. Serving on the seniors' selection committee were Cheryl Foytick Barry '81, Arnold J. Haberkorn, Jr. '65, and Barbara Barr Thompson '70.

Biographies of all the award winners appear on the following pages.

Dr. Margaret A. Smith, who received her master's degree from IUP in 1971, is Pennsylvania's deputy secretary and commissioner for basic education. In talking about her role, she said, "This is a tremendously challenging time to be in education. There are now many opportunities for improving education, but the total educational community needs to cooperate. When Governor Thornburgh announced his agenda for increasing student achievement in Pennsylvania, it became my responsibility to help implement that priority." In a varied and impressive career, Dr. Smith has been a public school teacher, counselor, and administrator. Prior to accepting her state post in 1983, she was superintendent for three years of the Saucon Valley (Pa.) School District in eastern Pennsylvania. She has taught graduate educational administration courses at Lehigh University and at Penn State, where she earned her doctorate. Dr. Smith received her early schooling in Cochranton, Pennsylvania, and earned a bachelor's degree at what is now Edinboro University. Active in many professional organizations, she has served as president of the Pennsylvania Association of Pupil Personnel Administrators and was one of twenty-five selected for a national workshop sponsored by the American Association of School Administrators and the Ford Foundation on "Helping Women Advance Professionally." In the four areas of the state where she has worked, Dr. Smith was active in community affairs, particularly those that involved young people. School districts in these areas of the state with which she was associated were Saucon Valley, Wissahickon, Avon Grove, and DuBois. In the last, Dr. Smith was, among other things, president of the Drug Prevention Council, director of a youth employment service, and president of the Youth Center board.

Robert Reynolds '48

Robert Reynolds '48 is board chairman and president of Wallace M. Reid Company, a large commercial and personal lines insurance agency in Pittsburgh. For ten years, he was a member of the IUP Board of Trustees (now called the Council of Trustees), serving for part of that time as vice-president and secretary of the board. He also served as president of the Association of Trustees of Pennsylvania State Colleges and University. A lecturer for ten years in Pitt's School of Business Administration, he holds the Chartered Property and Casualty Underwriter designation and has a diploma as an Associate in Risk Management. Mr. Reynolds has been extraordinarily active in community affairs. He is board chairman of both the West Penn Motor Club (AAA) and the West Penn Insurance Agency, an Executive Committee member of Syria Temple, and a board member of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association, Christian Associates of Southwestern Pittsburgh, Syria Temple Improvement Association, Christian Associates, Pittsburgh Baptist Association, and other groups. When he headed the national independent agents' group, Mr. Reynolds was the subject of a long feature article in Independent Agent magazine. The writer found the following key to Mr. Reynolds's effectiveness in his professional and personal life: "While he expresses himself forcefully when he thinks he is right, he is quick to admit fault when he believes he has been wrong, and he's a man whose word can be relied on. What he has said he will do, he will do if at all possible."

Annalee Rosenswie Henderson '57

Annalee Rosenswie Henderson '57 teaches mathematics at State College (Pa.) High School. In 1983, she was among the first winners of the Presidential Awards for Excellence in Science and Mathematics. One science and one math teacher in each state are selected in the awards program, which is funded by the National Science Foundation and includes a $5,000 grant to each teacher's school and an introduction to the President. According to Mrs. Henderson, "The nicest thing about the award was that you had to be nominated by a peer. Think about it. President Reagan really doesn't know what kind of teacher I am. The honor was to be recognized by the people I work with." Mrs. Henderson has a master's degree from Penn State and taught there for several years in the mathematics department and in the business college. She accepted her position at the high school in 1973 and currently teaches two honors courses, an advanced placement calculus course, and two other senior courses. Active in the Pennsylvania Council of Teachers of Mathematics, Mrs. Henderson was editor of the PCTM Journal for four years. She has also edited the council's conference newsletter, served as a delegate-at-large on the executive board, and worked with various committees and presented sessions at conferences. In 1982, she received an award for her outstanding contributions to the council. A member of Altrusa International, Mrs. Henderson will assume the presidency of her local branch in June. Altrusa sponsors the Astra Club, a service-social club for girls, which she advises at State College High School.

A professor of education emeritus at Westminster College, Dr. Joseph R. Henderson '39 retired in 1980 as chairperson of the college's education department and director of its graduate program. Dr. Henderson began his career at Westminster, which is located in New Wilmington, Pennsylvania, in 1956. He is a native of Elders Ridge, Pennsylvania, and served as a teacher and principal in Indiana County Schools until 1941, when he became a high school principal in Kentucky. World War II took him to New York City, where he was an instructor in a U.S. Army school for three years. Returning to Kentucky in 1945, he directed the Annville Institute for three years. From 1948 to 1956, he chaired the social science department and taught sociology at Kentucky's Union College. Dr. Henderson, who received his M.A. and Ed.D. degrees from New York University, has received many honors and served in many consultative roles in the education field. He has been a visiting professor at Oxford University in England, a selected participant in several UNESCO world tours studying comparative education, a consultant to an American school in Egypt, and a delegate to several international education congresses. In the words of the person who nominated him for the alumni award, Dr. Henderson has been, and continues to be, "an outstanding representative of IUP in the field and profession of education."

Mary Kathryn Pound Jenkinson '37

Although Mary Kathryn Pound Jenkinson '37 grew up in Indiana County and later worked and studied in Detroit, she went to England in 1943 and has lived there ever since. A YWCA staff member, she was assigned upon her arrival to Sheffield, a city that had been heavily damaged by German bombs. There she met her late husband, John, whom she married in 1946. With the growth of her family, which includes a son and a daughter, Mrs. Jenkinson changed her status from YWCA staff member to YWCA volunteer. She became, successively, chairperson of the Sheffield YWCA, president for the region, and a member of the National Committee. From 1976 to 1980, she served as national president of the YWCA of Great Britain. In recognition of the work Mrs. Jenkinson had done on behalf of the city of Sheffield, she was appointed a magistrate in 1966. (Such appointments are made by the Lord Chancellor at the recommendation of local committees and are relinquished by the appointees on their seventieth birthdays.) In addition to her YWCA activities, Mrs. Jenkinson assisted her husband, an architect, in county and professional work. She has also been active in church committees on the local and regional levels. Despite her residence in England these many years, Mrs. Jenkinson has remained close to family and friends in western Pennsylvania.

Dr. Penny L. Burge '69

Dr. Penny L. Burge '69 is the alumni ambassador to the College of Home Economics. She is an assistant professor at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in Blacksburg. In this capacity, she teaches and advises graduate and undergraduate students, supervises student teachers, conducts research, provides inservice education, and develops curriculum. She also serves as a consultant in areas throughout Virginia. Dr. Burge received a master's degree from IUP in 1972 and a doctoral degree from Penn State in 1979. In addition to her experience at the college level, she was a high school teacher for two years (in the Cambria Heights Area School District in Patton, Pennsylvania) and a Head Start teacher for three years (in Morgantown, West Virginia). A member of several honorary societies and professional organizations, Dr. Burge has published widely in professional journals and has made radio spots and slide-tape presentations for Virginia's state education department. She is married and has a daughter who is less than a year old.

Joseph R. Henderson '39

Dr. Nancy Zebraskey Nelson '57

Dr. Nancy Zebraskey Nelson '57 is the alumni ambassador to the Department of Elementary Education. Her one-year term as vice-chancellor for academic policy and planning of Pennsylvania's State System of Higher Education began July 1, 1983. She is on leave from her regular position as vice-president of academic affairs at California University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Nelson received both her master's and doctor's degrees from Pitt and earned a certificate in college management from Carnegie-Mellon. A former teacher in the Mount Lebanon public schools, she served as an instructor at Penn State and at Pitt. She has been associated with California for nearly seventeen years, beginning as an associate professor of education and moving into a variety of academic administration positions. In 1978 she assumed the vice-presidential post. A member of several professional and honorary organizations, Dr. Nelson has also held office in various education groups. In 1981, she was recognized by the IUP Alumni Association with an Outstanding Alumni award. She and her husband, Richard, live in Mount Lebanon.

Thomas J. Senn '74

Thomas J. Senn '74 is the alumni ambassador to the Department of Safety Sciences. An industrial hygiene consultant to the Atlantic Richland Company in Los Angeles, he provides direction to the company's division and plant safety and industrial hygiene staffs. Another part of his job is the auditing of safety and health programs at various ARCO facilities, including coal mines, a research laboratory, fabrication mills, and offshore drilling rigs. For five years following his graduation from IUP, Mr. Senn was associated with ARCO Polymers in Pittsburgh as a safety and health specialist. He received a master's degree in industrial hygiene from Pitt in 1977 and is currently a candidate for an M.B.A. degree at UCLA. Certified as an industrial hygienist and safety professional, Mr. Senn is a member of several professional organizations. He is married to the former Lisa Ottaviani '76 and lives in West Covina.

Paul E. von Geis, who received a master's degree from IUP in 1977, is the alumni ambassador to the Department of Criminology. A deputy attorney general for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, he is assigned to the organized crime and public corruption unit in the western regional office in Pittsburgh. From 1979 to 1983, when he was appointed to his present position, Mr. von Geis was an assistant district attorney for Allegheny County. In this capacity, he served as a homicide prosecutor and general trial supervisor. Associated with the Wilkensburg Police Department from 1969 to 1979, he was first a patrolman and later a detective. He received a bachelor's degree from Pitt in 1973 and a J.D. degree from Duquesne in 1979. Mr. von Geis is married and the father of two daughters. He and his family live in Pittsburgh.

Paul E. von Geis '77(M)

George S. Walochik '49 is the alumni ambassador to the department of Geography and Regional Planning. He is retired as a senior research analyst from the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, with which he was associated for thirty-one years, and is a lecturer at George Mason University, Fairfax, Virginia. The recipient of a master's degree in geography from Northwestern University in 1950, Mr. Walochik concentrated at CIA on geographical regions of the USSR and Europe. In addition to his research in this area, he presented briefings to government officials and lectured at the Foreign Service Institute. Mr. Walochik served with the U.S. Army in the European theater of operations during World War II and with the U.S. Army Reserves, Corps of Engineers, from 1956 to 1976. He established the geography program at Prince Georges Community College, Largo, Maryland, where he was a lecturer from 1958 to 1962. He is the current president of the All Pennsylvania College Alumni Association's Washington Chapter. Mr. Walochik and his wife, the former Patricia McDaniel '49, live in Vienna, Virginia. They have a son and a daughter.

George S. Walochik '49

Lt. David S. Shekmer graduated from IUP in August and was commissioned a Regular Army officer. He graduated with honors from the Armor Officer Basic course and went on to attend the Officer Rotary Wing Aviator Course at Fort Rucker, Alabama. During his career at IUP, Lieutenant Shekmer worked hard in and out of class. The pledge master of Alpha Phi Omega, a national service fraternity, he was a leader in organizing fund-raising and community-service projects. He was a key figure in the operation of the Campus Book Exchange and an active promoter of campus blood drives. For four years, Lieutenant Shekmer worked for Student Co-op Recreational Services, donating much of his free time to teaching other students and local Boy Scouts to ski and to sail. Very active in IUP's ROTC program, he was an organizer of the award-winning Tenth Pennsylvania Company of the Association of the United States Army. Lieutenant Shekmer came to the university from Ambler, Pennsylvania.

Frederick D. Chapman has a major in geography and a minor in applied statistics. His grade average at the end of the last semester was 3.92 on a scale of 4.0. The recipient of several scholarships during his undergraduate career, Mr. Chapman traveled last fall to Jamaica to accept one of ten awards made to college seniors by the National Council for Geographic Education. An IUP undergraduate research grant is contributing toward Mr. Chapman's current project, a study of employment in Pennsylvania. Last summer, Mr. Chapman did an internship with the Crawford County (Pa.) Planning Commission. Selected for a cartographic internship with the National Geographic Society in Washington this coming summer, he is the first IUP student to be chosen for the society's very competitive program. He has taken several honors courses and participated in a variety of campus activities, including several connected with his major. Mr. Chapman came to IUP from Springboro, Pennsylvania.

Football '84: No Piece of Cake

Spring football practice was in full swing on campus through the spring. Big Indian gridders had much to prepare for, since their schedule will be a definite step up.

The Braves will open, for example, by traveling to Bucknell, a respected NCAA Division I-AA entrant, then hosting Findlay of Ohio, perennially one of the top small-college teams in the nation. Both are brand new to the IUP grid card.

Later, in addition to their traditional Pennsylvania Conference rivals, the tribe will entertain West Chester and will go to Southern Connecticut in November. The complete schedule reads:

- September 8--at Bucknell
(Sat. night)
- 15--Findlay
- 22--at Slippery Rock
- 29--West Chester
- October 6--Edinboro
- 13--at Clarion
- 20--Lock Haven/
Homecoming
- 27--at Shippensburg
- November 3--at Southern Connecticut
- 10--California/Parents

The Name Of the Game Was Change

Editor's Note: Angela Gentile is a 1984 graduate of IUP from Beaver, Pennsylvania. In the past few years, she has been one of a small but growing number of women sportswriters. The piece that follows is Angela's retrospective view of recent IUP sports history.

When I was a writer for my high school newspaper, the sports beat was last on the list of my favorite assignments. Three years of covering sports at IUP have changed all that.

In my sophomore year of college, I needed a work-study job. A notice in the Daily Bulletin told me that the Sports Information office needed someone to cover women's cross country. The rest, as they say, is history.

And what a history! An accurate one-word description of the past three years in IUP sports would be "change."

A major change occurred when Frank Cignetti '60 was named athletic director and subsequently designated football, men's and women's basketball, and women's gymnastics as emphasis sports. The goal was to make IUP highly competitive within NCAA Division II.

I covered the gymnastics team and watched the new coach at that time, Jan Anthony (a three-time All-American from Penn State), build a program during her two-year stay at IUP. In 1982, she coached the Lady Braves to a win in the AIAW Division II Eastern regionals. They finished third at the AIAW national championship and boasted two All-Americans.

The following year, Anthony coached the Lady Braves to a fourth-place finish at NCAA Division II regionals and Chris Beck to three All-American honors. In the meantime, she arranged tri-state meets for young gymnasts to help promote IUP. When she left the university to accept a head coach position at Division I Illinois State, Anthony left a well-established program to Dan Kendig, a former assistant gymnastics coach at Nebraska.

Some of the highlights: gymnast Chris Beck winning six All-American honors; the 1983 women's cross country team winning the Pennsylvania Conference championship and remaining undefeated until regional competition; the 1983-84 gymnastics team winning the Pennsylvania Conference championship for the first time; the women's basketball team winning the western division of the Pennsylvania Conference; and basketball player Cindy Davies's invitation to try out for the Olympic basketball team.

Along with the new sports emphasis came a sleek new IUP sports logo of a mounted Indian armed with a spear.

What some may call a loss but others will insist merely reflected the sentiments of the time was the fate of a proposed increase in the Activity Fee for the purpose of adding funds to the athletic program. In a nonbinding referendum, I-card holders turned down the idea in the largest voter turnout ever recorded on campus. A study I conducted for my Sports Journalism class found that students were against the increase because they were struggling to pay bills. However, since the vote was not binding, a partial increase was enacted. Controversy over the issue eventually cooled from a boil to a low simmer.

In spite of the changes of the past few years, I found there are some things about sports at IUP--and sports in general--that are eternal. There are contest losses by a point or two and others where IUP was behind from the start. In most cases, the coaches say that the team tried hard and that just a little more drive could have altered the result.

Then there are the wins--the most celebrated events. Wins make everyone happy: athletes and fans alike can go home saying, "We won." No matter if it is a cross country meet with a handful of spectators or a football game with a filled stadium, an enthusiasm for winning pervaded every IUP sports event I attended.

Overall, the things I liked best about IUP sports were that most athletes wanted to compete because of their love of sports and that most athletes had a lot to say: the "dumb jock" is a dumb stereotype.

Now that I am graduating, a lot of people ask if I would like to be a sportswriter or a sports information director. I always say yes, because gradually women are being recognized and hired in the field. Speakers in my classes have said there is going to be a need for more women sports writers in order to represent what the speakers call "the woman's point of view." This may or may not be true. I will soon find out.

Kendig strengthened the IUP program, developing an excellent practice area in the auxiliary gym and building a vault runway platform. He coached the Lady Braves to their first Pennsylvania Conference championship and to a fourth place at the NCAA Division II regionals and assisted Chris Beck in winning three more All-American honors.

IUP Women's Sports History: Short But Sweet

More change: IUP's entire women's sports program moved from AIAW Division III to NCAA Division II. A number of the coaches were sad to see the association go, because of its concern for women athletes and the changes that would result from being part of the NCAA. However, the IUP coaches and athletes have adjusted well. Many of the teams IUP competed against in the AIAW also had to move to NCAA Division II. The Lady Braves have done well and along the way have defeated some Division I teams.

As was mentioned in an earlier issue of Oak Leaves, the Pittsburgh Press last fall published a survey of college and university women's sports programs in the tri-state area.

The survey showed IUP to be the leader among all such programs in terms of number of sports sponsored (ten), of emphasis placed on them, and of ambitions harbored for their success.

Varsity-level women's sports at IUP began in 1971-72, when teams were fielded in basketball, fencing, tennis, and volleyball. Field hockey was added in 1972-73, and gymnastics competition commenced the following year. Starting in 1977-78, swimming, track and field, softball, and cross country were added, one each year. No sport has ever been dropped.

Tennis, volleyball, basketball, gymnastics, track and field, and cross country all report overall winning records, with tennis at 133-41 and cross country at 15-3 (counting only dual to quadrangular meets) leading the percentages. These two have also produced undefeated seasons, as has volleyball.

Individuals in women's swimming, field hockey, track and field, and gymnastics have achieved All-American honors, while volleyball star Diane McCormick was named to the Olympics and other national teams.

National recognition also came to IUP when it hosted the 1981 AIAW Division II National Championship Women's Track and Field Meet. IUP through the years developed strong ties with the AIAW, dividing its teams between Divisions II and III, but as of 1982-83, it entered all ten of its teams in NCAA Division II competition.

In 1982-83, the university also decided to designate two women's sports, basketball and football, as its "emphasis sports."

Through all these changes, the leadership of Ruth Podbielski as associate director of intercollegiate athletics has been a constant, and her coaching colleagues have offered similar stability and experience. Coaches of six of the ten teams have served since the initiation of their respective varsity sports—Nancy Barthelemy in fencing and volleyball, Mary Louise Eltz in tennis, Kofie Montgomery in swimming, and Ed Fry in track and field cross country.

Kenny Moore, second from left, was honored both as an athletic and an academic All-American at IUP's annual dinner that recognizes such student-athletes. The dinner was in April in Sutton Hall's Blue Room. Moore was named to both the Associated Press "small college" national team and the College Sports Information Directors of America Academic All-American roster for the second consecutive year. He is shown with IUP President John E. Worthen, left; his father, Kenneth Moore; a sister Vanessa Slezak; Football Coach George Chaump; and Athletic Director Frank Cignetti '80. This year's dinner honored fourteen individuals representing eight sports. In addition to Moore, they were Chris Beck (gymnastics); Scott Green (track and field); Kirk Stauffer, Bernie DiLoreto, and Ben Witter (golf); David Langton and Frank Wolk (soccer); Nick Yutko (cross country); Sally Riggs, Terri Flaherty, and Heidi Solbach (field hockey); and Rich Bonaccorsi and Randy Strayer (wrestling).

Alumni Leaf Lines

In the Chapters

Butler - Dinner and an evening at the symphony were scheduled in early May for members of the Butler (Pa.) chapter. The group met in February at the home of Gary and Karen Kapeleski McHugh '68 and made tentative plans for events throughout 1984.

Central Ohio - In early May, a group of central Ohio alumni met at the Hilton North in Worthington. The event's organizers were Richard and Edna Dave Armanini (1960 and 1958 respectively) and Patrick and Wendy Leax Sheridan '80. Included were a buffet luncheon and an informal meeting that featured news from IUP and introductions of those present.

Florida - The following account of a recent alumni gathering was provided by Nick Sudzina '69: "With more than seven hundred IUP graduates residing in Florida on a full or part-time basis, Dr. Ralph Cordier, retired dean of academic affairs who served the university for twenty-four years, conceived the idea of an IUP Florida alumni reunion. This event was held on February 19 at the Plant City Convention Center (Plant City is about eighteen miles east of Tampa.). A hundred and twenty persons attended and enjoyed a fine meal, fellowship, songfest, and the recognition of various and distinguished alumni and retired faculty. Featured speakers for the occasion from IUP were Dr. John Welty, vice-president for student and university affairs, and Tony Lenzi '54, executive director of the Foundation for IUP. They discussed IUP's high academic standing and record enrollment (more than 12,500 students). Among the recognized alumni was Marion Hill Johnson, who graduated from Indiana State Normal School in 1917. The songfest was led by Charles Davis '34, and Jim Anderson was unanimously 'elected' as the official pianist of the IUP Florida Alumni Association. Dr. Cordier was honored as 'dean of IUP's Florida Connection.' Woodrow '34 and Eva Nicholas Phillippi '31 will chair the planning committee for next year's reunion and will be assisted by Pam and Nick Sudzina, full-time residents of Lakeland."

Indiana County - On a rainy evening in late March, the Indiana County chapter held an officers' election in the Sutton Hall Blue Room. Chosen as president for the next two years was Jim Laughlin '51. Karen Hough '69 will serve as vice-president, Ann Miltz '75 as secretary, and Marsha Delaney '74 (M) as treasurer. The group is planning a corn roast for late summer.

Pittsburgh - At a luncheon at the city's College Club in March, members of the Pittsburgh chapter elected new officers. Lenore Weatherly Bayus '44 was selected as the group's president. Other officers included Mary Jane Miller Tuttle '47, vice-president; Patricia Dible Thompson '49, secretary; and Eileen Quinn Hull '41, treasurer.

Of Interest to Alumni

Members of the Class of 1964 are urged to attend a luncheon on July 14 at Charlie J's Restaurant in Irwin, Pa. Organizer of the luncheon, Barbara Lang Martin '64, says that meal orders will be placed by individuals from the menu but that those planning to be present should contact her. Barbara's address is 301 Berkshire Road, Mechanicsburg, Pa. 17055.

The twinkle in his eye. The crinkle of his nose. Now you can capture all his most loving glances with Kodacolor VR 200 film. Even in shifting light, or with sudden movement. It's the most versatile color print film ever from Kodak. After all, he's not just another pretty face.

Because time goes by.
